

Editorial

Dear readers,

The editorial board received a number of inspiring and stimulating articles written by the PhD students and therefore we decided to give priority to these contributions. The aim of this journal is to disseminate new knowledge from the area of tourism and PhD students' papers are good sources of this new knowledge.

Coincidentally, the editorial office received articles with similar topics, focused on destination management. Thus, you can learn about the situation in Lower and Upper Austria, innovations in the mountain destinations of Slovakia, and cooperation of all subjects in tourism in the Swiss Alps and the High Tatras. In addition, the last article describes the situation of spatial differentiation of tourists in Slovakia.

The review of the book of Geopsychology and Ecopsychology in Tourism is also worth reading.
