

Preface

Dear readers,

The first issue of the second volume of the Czech Journal of Tourism introduces important changes that are related to switching from Czech to English. Therefore, we are pleased to inform you that the Czech Journal of Tourism is now accessible even to non-Czech readers and opened to foreign contributors as well. The internationalisation meets the main objective of the journal, i.e. to support/strengthen the exchange of knowledge and experience of tourism. This step is in accordance with the overall scope of the journal that respects multidisciplinary characteristics of tourism.

The current issue includes both review and original research papers focusing on management in tourism (visitor management and destination management) and sociology of tourism. The issue also offers a case study analysing a Polish regional tourism product. Furthermore, the journal presents a report about the present activities of the Ministry for Regional Development of the Czech Republic.
